Dr. Margee Greenfield, to ask if it was feasible to request EMU with the military recruiters. At the forum, Vice-president of Marketing and Enrollment Shirley Yoder reported that she had called the planner of College Night, because they were divided."

"I think we have to have a clear distinction between having diversity in the classroom and recruiting for a cause that is contrary to the tenets of EMU."

"I do not feel enough voices are being heard..."

The group plans to meet again this evening (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. in the Campus Center. All are invited.

Opposition to the possible war is also being expressed elsewhere on campus. An anonymous donor called EMU and offered to pay all long distance phone bills for students who call their representatives in order to protest a war on Iraq. The SGA sponsored the activity, and was also instrumental in getting it moving.

Thaddeus Hollingsworth, an SGA co-president, stayed at the table along with other SGA members to monitor and assist the students with the calls. Hollingsworth was present enlightened with the idea a day before the calls were made available to students. "It was something we were going to do," he said. He worked with other SGA members in setting it up. While talks and debates continue to take place in DC, many on campus will continue talking 'preemptive' measures to try to avoid a war with Iraq.

14 Angry Jurors, 8 p.m. in Lehman

College Night is that during the event, "Many students get involved and do not realize that the military recruiters are part of the event."

Said Gingerich, who has had military recruiters visit his classes to share the military perspective, said "I think we have to have a clear distinction between having diversity in the classroom and recruiting for a cause that is contrary to the tenets of EMU."

According to Gingerich, who has had military recruiters visit his classes to share the military perspective, said "I think we have to have a clear distinction between having diversity in the classroom and recruiting for a cause that is contrary to the tenets of EMU."

Said Lapp, "I may have many inconsistencies in life. However, I very much doubt that I have any more inconsistencies than most people who are trying to follow in the Christian way." He added, "I find that the people who are objecting, and vocing objections to this presence of military recruiters, I find them to be very inconsistent with their attitudes in other areas."

According to Brubaker, the faculty were not involved last year when the decision was made to re-invite College Night "probably because of inadequate recognition that this was a concern of theirs. Sometimes we don’t do as good as we should in recognizing what constituencies care and should be involved with decision making."

Lapp finds the presence of military recruiters in College Night to be incidental to it being a college recruiting event.
